A Small Town with Great Attractions

Tajiri Town is located in the southern part of Osaka Prefecture. It is a small town with an area of 5.62 square kilometers with a population of approximately 8,700. The central part of the Kansai International Airport on an artificial island belongs to Tajiri Town, and the actual area of the town excluding the artificial island is 2.35 square kilometers, which means that it is the smallest town in Japan.

Although it is such a small town, agriculture and fisheries have been popular since ancient times. Tajiri Town is known as the birthplace of nationwide-famous Senshu onions. In the late 19th century, spinning factories were located here and there, and industries in the town developed considerably.

The Kansai International Airport opened in 1994, and Rinku Town was developed in the coastal area. Tajiri Town has been developing into a secured, warm and attractive town with bright people.

This is a romantic sunset spot, different in mood from the daytime scenery.
